HELD FOR ARSON IN FIRE WHERE SIX LOSE LIVES

New York Realtor Accused of Burning Home of Father-inlaw, Playwright—Result of Business Quarrel

LATTER'S DEATH ON EVE PRODUCTION FIRST PLAY

Associated Press

NEW YORK, Oct. 18.—William A. Ford, real estate broker, and Raymond Anderson were arrested here today on charges of arso nand murder in connection with a fire which destroyed a Brooklyn home and incinerated six persons. Authorities say Anderson confessed and accused Ford of setting the fire. Ford's father-in-law, George Keim, playwright ,three women and two other men lost their lives. Ford and Keim were formerly partners in a theatrical enterprise. They severed business relations after a quarrel several years ago. Keim's death came on the eve or the production of his first play, accepted after years of endeavor

HEIRESS WEDS DAD'S FOOTMAN; LAUGHS AT AT CASTE LINES

LONDON, Oct. 18 — Love boots at caste lines."

Which is a British heiress' way of telling the world—including her irate father—that she has married the man she loves, even though he was only a footman.

British society is smiling up its sleeve, but Brig. Gen. C. A. Wilding, one of the most distinguished men in Wales, can't see the joke. For when he sat down to breakfast the other morning, opened his morning paper, and glanced at the headlines, he had the shock of his life

His only child, Miss Carol, had run away to be married to his footman, Reginald Davies!

It was a shock that only an old British aristocrat can get.

To get the picture completely, you must remember that this is in Great Britain where society is not democratic, however the government may be. Miss Carol belongs to The Wildings, the Wildings who have owned Penbryn Hall in Montgomeryshire for centuries. Even in the days of the Stuart kings of England the Wildings were big folk. They were gentry.

The present head of the family is a distinguished soldier. He served with great honors in campaigns in Burma and Nigeria and also in the World War in which he was frequently mentioned in dispatches in the most laudatory terms.

His only child, just over 21, recently returned home from the continent where she had gone to the swellest of swell schools. And just about that time a fair-haired young man about 26 bobbed up.

He was Reginald Davies, son of a dock laborer at Newport. He had a good record in the war. He joined up in 1911 and served until he was badly wounded in 1918, when he was demobilized. All this strongly recommended him to General Wilding who took him as a footman.

Presumably Davies looked mighty well in his uniform with the knee breeches. At any rate he caught the eye of the heiress of the house.

And although "it simply just isn't done, you know," it was done.

There was a speedy wooing on the part of the soldier-footman. The other day they eloped, the bride driving off in her own car. When she is 25 she will have a million dollars of her own, regardless of what her angry father may do.

As for General Wilding, the only thing he has done up to date, has been to send a notice to all the Welsh papers indignantly denying he had given his consent to the marriage.

So Wales keeps on buzzing. Because not only has the young lady proved the old adage about love laughing at locksmiths, but she has added her new saying: "Love boots at caste lines."

Character Analyst Sizes Up David Lloyd George

What manner of man is this David Lloyd George, former prime minister of England, who has won such a warm welcome from the American people on his visit here, as to equal the ovation given a popular presidential candidate?

How has this man—of all the leading characters before, during and after the World War—gained supremacy in the world of politics and diplomacy, as well as high favor in the hearts of millions of people?

Seeking an answer to these questions, Jessie Allen Fowler, famous character analyst was asked to explain this man's wonderful rise to fame, through her analysis of his character. Here is her report:

David Lloyd George, coming from the ranks, has preserved a genuineness and simplicity that are acceptable to all types of people and nationalities

As his photograph shows, he has executive ability and remarkable endurance, hence rarely becomes exhausted. His breadth of head is responsible for this. He has a fever for motion and has never learned the "gentle art of loafing."

His largeness of vision, through his active sublimity, is another remarkable feature of his mind. He quickly grasps all sides of a subject while others are pondering over one side of it. In fact, he combines the spirits of Bright, Cobden and Chamberlain, as well as of Lincoln, Roosevelt and Harding.

He has the courage of his convictions and is a true born political fighter. He is ever ready with an answer to his assailants and enjoys exchanging intellectual thrusts, which shows his large combativeness. He has a wonderful supply of wit and humor, with which he amuses his friends and answers his opponents He loves a bit of fun even at his own expense.

People First

Through this large benevolence he shows one of the most admirable traits of his character—his sympathy for the people. He is not snobbish or dignified, but lends an ear to the commoner and makes friends with the people. This feature of his mind has been largely expressed in his work for Welsh disestablishment, land monopoly and the cause of labor.

His large casuality, or faculty of tracing effects to their causes, giving him originality of mind, is an able ally, and has enabled him to preserve an individuality of his own. Hence his speeches are the outcome of brilliant improvisations rather than labored or elaborately constructed arguements.

His dynamic will power, or firmness, has carried weight with his utterances and often forced an issue that seemed impossible

Good Picker

His institutional capacity is particularly strong, and it has helped him in his strategic work in selecting men as colleagues to work with him in a coalition cabinet just as Lincoln retained Stanton in his cabinet although he was a Democrat in his political views.

His ingenuity, through constructive ness, has helped him to come to quick decisions. He is able to bring to a focus all the knowledge he possesses in turning matters at a critical moment.

He is a man with great will power and determination of mind, and shows forensic power and persevering skill

He unites courage, sympathy and imagination, which give him his large vision of future power.

OCCUPATION OF RUHR DIVERTED AMERICAN ORDERS ELSEWHERE

By Associated Press.

ESSEN, Oct. 18.—Many orders from United States firms which have been held up because of numerous complications arising out of the Ruhr occupation have been duplicated and filled by wholesalers or manufacturers in unoccupied Germany, according to industrialists here. This applies chiefly to tools, cutlery, smaller machinery, spare parts, nuts and bolts, and a certain amount of dress goods materials.

Some good shipments from the Ruhr reached United States ports during the summer, but only a very small percentage of the orders which were on hand when the occupation began. The chief obstacle of getting finished materials out of the district has been the refusal of the German wholesalers and manufacturers to pay the export tax imposed by the French and Belgians as part of their plan to collect reparations. The Germans refused to pay this tax on their goods, contending that, in the first place, any such cooperation with the occupation authorities had been prohibited by the Berlin government, and on this account it would have been a violation of the program of passive resistance.

The textile center of Crefeld had on hand a lot of special orders for dress goods which the American importers found impossible to have duplicated in other parts of Germany, because the necessary machinery was not available. These goods were intended for use last spring and summer and have been reposing in warehouses all all these months. Dealers say the goods will be just as serviceable and fully as fashionable next summer

According to word received from the United States, shipments from the Ruhr to American ports, by irregular routes perhaps have been carried on more or less ever since the occupation began, by one way or another which no one here will take the responsibility of explaining. These shipments have been in small lots. it has been suggested, this being deemed advisable because of the "difficulties" of getting the cargoes over the frontiers. Just how this game has been carried on, and by whom, has never been brought to light, but several smugglers' agents are reported to have cleared small fortunes in the transactions

French authorities assert that one of their principal sources of income from the occupation has been the seizure of goods at the frontiers where smugglers have been endeavoring to deceive them by avoiding the prescribed routes. In one instance, silk, valued at nearly a million dollars, and said to have been consigned to the United States, was seized in German shipments of a railroad of penknives and scissors from Solingen was confiscated, this also being destined, it was said, for American wholesalers

NEW YORK, Oct. 18.—John R. Young, secretary of the national committee, said Chicago abandoned hope of obtaining the convention when it was announced New York intended to raise at least $250,000 to entertain the convention next summer. Word from Cleveland today, Young said, was that the city was confident it could raise funds to pay expenses but had decided to relinquish claim because it learned the majority of the members of the national committee had openly spoken in favor of New York.

CANDIDATES FOR COMMISSIONERS NAMED SAT'DAY

Allison, Cooke, Evans, Giles, Manring, and Scales, All for Office, Announce Platforms to Voters

ALL PLEDGE SELVES FOR CIVIC BETTERMENT

Middlesboro's primary election will be held Saturday, with polls open from 6 a m to 4 p m. There are 3209 registered voters in this city and these men and women will at this time have a chance to choose their candidates for commissioners. Each will vote for two of the commissioner candidates, J. W. Allison, C. E. Cooke, J. E. Evans, H. R. Giles, J. L. Manring and F. P. Scales The four that receive the most votes will remain in the race, the winners of which will be decided at the November election.

This primary election is very important for the city. It is particularly essential for the honest people of Middlesboro to turn out and vote. Women are urged in particular to come to the polls, and to come as early as possible so as to avoid the crowds that always come in later in the day. The city government is one that should be of greatest importance to the women.

J. W. Allison, whose name appears first on the ticket, is a prominent business man and has outlined his platform clearly. He stands for a sane management of city affairs and advocates in particular a systematic audit of the treasurer's account books by certified public accountants. He favors school improvement as needed and advocates particularly improvements in outlying sections.

C. E. Cooke, whose record as postmaster and progressive citizen is endorsement in itself, has been persuaded to run by his friends in the interest of a cleaner and better Middlesboro which they believe he will promote. He stands particularly for an economical administration and strict law enforcement. He promises to give his time and attention largely to his work if elected and to insure proper administration.

J. E Evans, although he has not outlined his platform ,makes his stand for "everything that is for the interest of the city and its citizens," and promises to serve, if elected, for the satisfaction of all, advocating such improvements and progress as the city should have.

H. R. Giles, prominent East End merchant, promises to better conditions in the city advocating a business-like city administration ,fairness to all classes and adequate facilities for keeping the streets in good condition. He particularly pledges himself for strict law observance in the city.

J. L Manring, a former mayor of Middlesboro and one of the city's best known citizens ,pledges himself to the building of streets and all other improvements consistent with economy. He also advocates the continuance of the present public school system and a fund for maintaining and repairing the streets which are now being built.

F. P. Scales, president of the Middlesboro Country Club and last man to enter the commissioners' race, declares himself for "Middlesboro and her taxpayers, and anything for the betterment of the city." He favors a business administration and a progressive program in all lines so as to put Middlesboro in the forefront among Kentucky cities.

There has been some question to the eligibility of H. R. Giles and C. E. Cooke because of their failure to file expenditure accounts before October 10 This, however, seems to be mostly cleared up as decisions in several similar cases in Kentucky show that the date of the filing of these expenditures is not mandatory. Both of these men have now filed their accounts.

SURVEYORS FIND A SEPTEMBER MORN IN OREGON FOREST ROCK

By Associated Press.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 18.—A life-size figure of a nude woman, carved in stone, has been found in the heart of an Oregon forest by surveyors of the Southern Pacific railroad, according to the company's officials. The work of art was found by a surveying crew about four miles west of Crater Lake, Oregon.

The figure is pitted and weather beaten and shows the mark of time and exposure. Art students declare that if carved by an artist, it would have required from four to five months of constant work.

A THOUGHT

Herein is love, not that we loved God, but that he loved us, and sent his Son to be the propitiation for our sins.—1 John 4:10.

It is possible that a man can be so changed by love that one could not recognize him to be the same person.—Terence.

SOUTHEASTERN KY. AND THE REPUBLICAN PARTY

Two weeks from Tuesday the voters of Kentucky go to the polls to determine the future of the state for the next three years, to endorse the constructive program of the Republican party for better schools, better roads and improved taxation methods, or to return to the ranks of the Democrat party. It is a momentous time for Kentucky and the eyes of the whole nation are upon this state to see what her decision will be.

Southeastern Kentucky, always Republican in politics, has a particular interest in the election this year because the Republican candidate for governor is a man from this section one who understands the needs of the undeveloped portions of this section, and who, working for the general good of the state will assure the people of this section of a fair deal where they have in the past been sadly overlooked.

Campaigners tell us that the election hinges on Southeastern Kentucky, almost on this Eleventh District. Western and Central Kentucky have been Democratic for years and with a candidate from their section, one who promises they what they ask, it is natural that they are supporting him. Southeastern Kentucky knows that to the Republican party and to the Republican party only in Kentucky, can she look for help in developing these places where development is sadly needed, in bringing funds here that will make her roads and schools rank with those in other parts of the state.

Surely, then, the voters of this section will not be indifferent to the issues at stake. If these voters can be made to understand the true situation so that they will turn out on election day victory to the Republican party is assured. This applies not only to Middlesboro, Pineville, Harlan and the other cities, but to every country precinct in this whole section. It applies not only to the men, but to the women as well, for a woman's vote is the equal of a man's and surely better schools and advantages for the children of the section are as much a woman's interests as a man's.

We must vote election day, and we must, if we are interested in the general welfare lend our help to getting other voters, who are indifferent or careless, out to the polls.

AN APPEAL OF OLDEN DAYS TO THE SOUTH

Many years before the Civil War Governor Hammond of South Carolina, in pleading for the industrial development of that State, said:

"Investigation would show that only nations that developed commerce and manufactures in addition to agriculture were prosperous," and he added:

"Wider range and additional pursuits are needed to awaken all dormant intellect and energy. God speed the day when her politicians will be exhorting her people to domestic industry instead of state resistance; when our Clay clubs and Democratic clubs will be turned into societies for the advancement of scientific agriculture and the promotion of mechanic arts."

What a wonderful appeal such a statement as this would have today upon every part of the South if every governor in the South would call upon the people to turn their political clubs into societies for the "advancement of scientific agriculture and the promotion of mechanic arts!"

Governor Hammond was wise in his day and generation. He saw that agriculture would deteriorate without industrial development, and he saw that no country could be permanently prosperous based on agriculture alone. He was pleading for the concentration of the thought of the people of South Carolina upon commerce and industry not only for the larger prosperity which they would bring to all interests but for the broadening of thought and energy which would be created thereby.

May the time soon come when, following Governor Hammond's suggestion, political clubs of all kinds will be devoted more to the discussion of economic problems and the development of industry and of scientific agriculture than to the discussion of the threadbare arguments which so long have tied the South to loud mouthed personal and party politics instead of to business upbuilding methods, and to the fetish of free trade; for free trade always has, and whenever in operation always will, halt the industrial development of the South and of every other part of the country.

The opportunity of the South has come to turn from the fetish of free trade and on purely economic grounds to work for a protective policy which would advance its agricultural interests and develop its industrial affairs, and increase its commerce to the benefit of all. Governor Hammond's advice was wise.

The Eligibility of the City Commissioner Candidates

Editor Daily News:

The court of appeals in the cases of Sparkman vs Saylor and Felts vs Edwards settles the question of the eligibility of the two candidates who did not file their pre-election expense accounts ten days before the primary. The ruling of the court was as follows:

"The filing of the pre-election as well as the post election statement by the candidate is a mandatory requirement as to the time when the statement should be filed is directory, and a substantial compliance with the law under the particular circumstances of the case in regard is sufficient.

Felts vs Edwards, 201 S. W. 145. 181 Ky., 287.

"Sparkman vs Saylor, 180 Ky., 263; 202 S. W. 649."

Mr. Giles filed his statement on the 13th and Mr. Cooke filed his on the 15th, immediately after his return from the Grand Lodge of Odd Fellows. Mr. Cokee stated that all matters in connection with his race had been handled by his friends and he did not know that this matter had been overlooked.

According to the ruling of the court all candidates have complied with the law and are qualified to serve.

Berton Braley's Poem

ENOUGH

I wanted to wander
"Way out over yonder,"
Beyond the far rim of the sea:
The breezes were calling
With voices enthralling,
The wide world was summoning me.

So all by my lonely,
Just me—and me only—
I traveled, and traveled some more:
But after a season,
I found, for some reason,
The wanderer's trail was a bore.

Strange oceans and peoples,
Lands, temples and steeples,
I viewed them with lack-lustre eyes:
Not one of them thrilled me,
And home sickness filled me,
A sickness I couldn't disguise.

No more wander-trailing,
Thank heaven, I'm sailing
Again to my own native loam:
My roaming is over,
I've failed as a rover,
Thank heaven, I'm on my way home.

LETTER FROM LESLIE PRESCOTT TO LESLIE PRESCOTT, CONTINUED

I never will be able to understand, dear little Marquise, what malignant fairy made me tell Mr. Cocoran that Karl had given me the pearls. The moment the words were out I would have given anything if I could have taken them back. But, alas, words once spoken are of the few things in this world that cannot be taken back or changed or made over. They must stand and we must stand by them.

I could frankly confess to Mr. Cocoran that I had told him a lie especially as seemingly I had no excuse for doing it, and having told him the lie I, of course, had to bring many other untruths to bolster it up.

Down in my heart I didn't believe that Mr Cocoran though I was telling the truth and quickly my brain tried to form a plan by which I could make him think that a young man, even as rich as Karl, would give me as beautiful a present as the pearls.

After a little hesitation I said, "You know Karl Whitley and I have been like brother and sister all our lives. Ever since I was a little girl and admired pearls in a shop window Karl said to me he would see that I had some when I married. I am sure that neither he nor I had any idea what that promise entailed as neither of us knew the value of the milky white jewels. But when I married it, as you see, he kept his childish promise."

"Of course, Leslie" said Mr. Cocoran, "I have no idea what pearls of this kind cost, but I imagine they are very expensive. Does your mother know about this?"

"Oh yes," I answered. "Karl has also given Alice a string since she went to England. You don't think I would take them if she hadn't approved, do you?"

Again it was some evil spirit speaking through my lips, for certainly I should never have allowed Mr. Cocoran to think that my dear mother would do such a thing.

Mr. Cocoran, however, seemed to think if mother approved it was all right. He said no more, but gave me a note to a friend of his who was a jewel broker and I got out of his office as soon as possible.

When I told the man my business and showed him my pearls, it seemed to me he was greatly astonished.

"My dear young lady," he said after a little examination, "do you realize what these beads, as you call them, are worth today?"

"I have no idea of their value," I said, "but I would like to sell you three or four of them. Mr. Cocoran said that you would deal honestly with me."

"Of course I will, and as it happens I have a patron who is collecting stones of this size. In fact, he has been collecting them for years."

"How much will you give me for the three?"

"I can't afford to give you over three thousand dollars apiece for them."

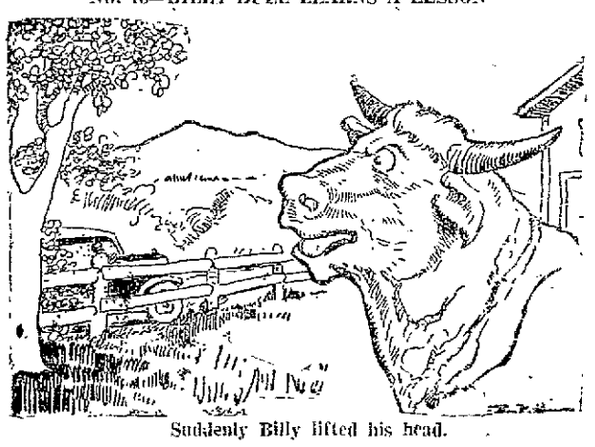
NO. 18—BILLY BULL LEARNS A LESSON



Suddenly Billy lifted his head.

Billy, the bull didn't like red. Everybody in Squealy-Moo Land knew that, even Gadabout Gobbler had enough sense to keep out of the pasture lot.

Billy was really a fine fellow, but like lots of nice people, he had a fad. Just as you don't like soup with onions in it, or going to bed early, or let-down dresses, or an overcoat, or castor-oil, or the school-bell.

Really, when I think of it, Billy is quite sensible, there being only one thing he doesn't like and a hundred and one things we don't like. I'm as sure as anything that onions and dresses and overcoats and castor-oil and school-bells never worried Billy for a minute. No doubt he thinks we are queer.

But there! I'll have to start all over again.

One day Missez Cow said to him, says she, "Billy, you're very foolish to hate red so! Some of the loveliest things in the world are red. Roses and sunsets and barns. Why, my goodness! In the winter time you are tickled to death to stay in the red barn and keep warm."

"Yes, I know," snorted Billy, pawing the ground obstinately. "I do like a few red things. It all depends on what they are. If it's something I don't know about, then I get all upset. I just can't help it—like that thing that goes tearing along the road on the other side of the fence sometimes. It's not only red but shiny, but it snorts and yells and stutters and shrieks until it gets on my nerves. But it goes so fast I can never catch up to it—not even if I could get over the fence."

Suddenly Billy lifted his head. Off in the distance was a chug-chugging sound that came nearer and nearer.

"There it is now," roared Billy angrily. "It just comes here to tease me."

And before Missez Cow could stop him, he lowered his head and rushed for the fence.

Billy was so mad that his horns took off the two top bars and he went over with a leap—right at the shiny red thing that was almost behind him.

There was a noise and the red thing stopped.

In a few minutes Billy came limping back.

"I guess it didn't like me, either," he panted. "It can buck awfully hard. A lot harder than I can."

Nancy and Nick and Mister Dodger washed off his sore places and tied him up. Billy took it all as patiently as a lamb.

Missez Cow was just about to say, "I told you so, Billy Bull," but the fairyman stopped her.

"A good lesson like this is worth a hundred lectures," he whispered. "Billy won't meddle with an automobile again."

HOW CAN A POOR MAN GET AHEAD?

Smoke and savings from the material for this achievement in getting ahead. For years this man of smoke and savings, a poor Spanish cigar maker, left his small savings with his employer. He drew no interest. It was a custom of the old world and he followed it. Then he came to America and worked "on the bench" here. After a while an American friend learned of the Spaniard's savings and told him that money could and would work for him safely and surely if put into safe bonds.

The Latin, contrary to traditions, was no gambler. It happened that his friend could direct him to a reputable investment house. At the end of 25 years the cigar maker had $5,000 from his small savings.

Not much? Only $5,000 for a quarter of a century of work?

Yes, but immensurably better than nothing and still infinitely better than the shallow experience of loss as the gullible victim of a low bucket-shop or a crooked stock dealer, for the $5,000 brought in opportunity.

Opportunity came with a young American cigar salesman ambitious to own his own business. He knew the selling end of the business. The Spaniard knew the manufacturing end. They formed a partnership. The $5,000 financed the undertaking. It was speculating in the true sense. Both men took a chance, but it was speculation founded on sound business experience, sense and honesty. Most of the so-called speculation that is nothing but the shiftless desire of inexperience to get something for nothing, is scarcely worthy of even the name of gambling. The Spaniard's speculation was not based on tips or "systems," but on the fact that he knew the manufacturing end of the cigar business and his partner knew the selling end, and both were honest. They made a fortune. They own a brand of cigars that is seen in almost every city. And the Spaniard is still putting his savings—much larger now—into bonds.

ARABIAN CLUB FORMED IN CONJUNCTION WITH LODGE

Middlesboro Lodge No. 83 met last Friday night in regular session and formed a club to be known as the Arabian Club, which will move in conjunction with the lodge. The following officers were elected: J. W. Fallon, President; E. J. Cannon, Vice President; Herbert Ball, Secretary and Treasurer. Only members of the lodge can become members of the club. SISTER Mary's KITCHEN

Chicken

With turkey so high and so scarce and chickens also high, table luxuries for the Sunday dinner sometimes seem so impossible that the cook despairs and thinks she will serve mush and milk one day and chicken the next to have a change and yet "break even" at the end of the month.

In market quotations the terms broilers, springers, chicken and fowl are often found.

Broilers are the small birds that are split down the back and broiled without more cutting up. This is the most extravagant way to use chicken. The meat is so immature and there is so little of it that one pays for mere bone.

Springers are the chickens that are past the broiler stage and must be cut up for serving. The birds are disjoined and fried or cooked as desired. A springer usually weighs from two and a half to three pounds dressed.

Chicken is a bird beyond the frying stage but under a year old. These birds are delicious in a number of ways. The meat is juicy and tender, mature and at its best.

Fowl is a chicken over a year old. This is usually cheaper than chicken and if properly cooked very much to be desired. It can be used for chicken in many instances.

To Broil Chicken

Allow one "broiler" for two persons. Singe and carefully remove pinfeathers. Wash well and wipe dry. Make a slash with a sharp pointed knofe through the backbone the entire length of the bird. Lay open and remove contents from inside. The tiny ribs should be cut away from the backbone and pulled from breastbone.

Dip in melted butter, place in a dripping pan, skin side down, sprinkle with salt and pepper and put in a hot oven for 20 minutes. The oven must be hot enough to brown the meat as it cooks.

To Fry Chicken

Wash well after dressing. Disjoin and let stand in cold salt water for an hour. Drain and roll in flour seasoned with salt and pepper. Use about three-fourths cup of flour, 1 teaspoon salt and 1-4 teaspoon pepper for one chicken. Melt three tablespoons butter, three tablespoons lard in an iron spider. When hot put in chicken and brown, turning often to prevent burning and procure an even brown on all sides. Cover and cook over a slow fire for 45 minutes. Remove from spider to a hot platter and then keep warm.

Brown 1 1-2 teaspoons flour in fat in spider, stirring until mixture is perfectly blended. Slowly add 2 cups milk or thin cream, season with salt and pepper and cook until thick and smooth. The tiny particles of flour that come from the chicken should be left in the gravy.

This recipe is for the frying of "springers." If an older chicken is used the chicken should be parboiled in boiling water to cover until tender. Let cool in the water. Drain, dip in flour and fry in 1 tablespoon butter and 1 tablespoon lard. Use the chicken broth for the gravy.

Some cooks prefer to try out fat salt pork, using the tried out fat for frying. Less salt is needed in seasoning.

If baking powder or soda biscuits are served with fried chicken and gravy the chicken "goes" further. A "springer" can be served to four persons, but not stretch of the imagination can make it serve more.

"Broilers" are in the city markets at any time of year but "springers" are best from August to November.

FOR AMBASSADOR

Photo is of James M. Beck, New York, solicitor general of the Department of Justice, who is being mentioned as the probable successor to Ambassador Harvey to the Court of St. James.

CRISSCROSS FORMATION ATTACKING WEAK SIDE IS TROUBLESOME PLAY

The quarterback fakes the ball by a direct pass, starts as if on an off tackle smash, but passes the ball back to the outside halfback coming back, who angles in between defensive tackle and guard. If this easier to take the defensive tackle in, the play should go wider, just inside the defensive end.

One lineman is designed to block the defensive left end, the other two who come around go through the opening as interferers.

The inside halfback assists on the defensive tackle.

The fullback starts with the quarterback and after the ball is delivered to the outside halfback, they block defensive players who may attempt to tackle from the rear. This play is likely to be especially effective against teams whose ends do not charge.

THE COMING OF THE FIRST TEETH

There are twenty teeth in the temporary set and as a rule they appear in the following order:

2.—Lower front teeth

Two lower front teeth appear 5 to 7 months.

Two upper front teeth appear 6 to 8 months.

Two lower front teeth appear 7 to 9 months.

Two upper front teeth appear 9 to 10 months.

Four back (molars) teeth—one on each side of the jaw teeth appear 10 to 14 months.

Four more molars—back of all the others—appear about 2 years.

Four cuspid ("eye" and "stomach" teeth) appear at 2 to 2 1-2 years.

Teething is a normal process and should not cause illness if the baby is well and is properly fed and cared for. There may be an increase in saliva and some fretfulness due to pressure of the teeth against the gums, but fever and diarrhoea are not caused by the cutting of teeth.

Important as the mineral salts and vitamines are to the teeth of the unborn child they are of equal importance during the first years of his life. Soon after birth the process of forming the enamel on the permanent teeth is begun and at six to eight months of age it is well advanced. At the sixth month the crowns of the six year molars—the first permanent teeth—are fairly well formed and after this period no food taken will change the enameling which is completed at this early age. For the production of soundness of the permanent teeth green vegetables, cereals, and cows' milk must be the foundation of the diet for the young child, and mothers' milk or modified cows' milk for the nursing baby. It was not until comparatively recently that we realized the teeth of the adults are largely made or ruined in infancy. Children suffering from rickets and diseases of malnutrition have chalky bones and teeth: the bones of the jaw become narrower, the teeth are relayed and irregular crooked and crowded in position and are soft and non-resistant to decay.

SEEK RELIGIOUS TRAINING FOR AMERICAN CHILDREN

By Associated Press.

WESTERVILLE, O., Oct. 18.—One of the great efforts of the year of the International Sunday School Association to arouse the continent "to the spiritual need of children" will be put forth the seven days starting tomorrow.

The organization has designated that period as Children's Week in the Sunday Schools of the United States, the ninth annual observance.

Dr. Walter G. Clippinger, chairman of the children's division of the International Association, said today that at least 13,000,000 of the 25,000,000 children under 12 years of age in the country are not receiving any religious education.

"It is admitted universally that our national life and prosperity can be promoted only as it is established upon a healthy religious idealism. It is to help change these conditions and make it possible for all children to receive religious training that this movement is being promoted," Dr. Clippinger said.

The program of the week will consist of meetings of parents and Sunday School teachers; holding of Sunday School exhibits and institute and house-to-house visitation.

MAY AGAIN CHANGE TIME HARLAN TRAIN

Kiwanians Will Take up Matter—More Than Fifty at Today's Meeting

The matter of the time of the early Harlan train, up for discussion several weeks ago, was brought up for consideration at the Kiwanis club meeting today. The time of the train was changed the first of October from 5:50 a. m., to 5:05 a. m. making the time so early that practically all transients who wish to make the train pass up Middlesboro and make Pineville their headquarters. Announcement was made to the Kiwanians that if Middlesboro people wanted the change bad enough, L. & N. officials would probably change the time back to even a later time than before.

Middlesboro Kiwanians indicated emphatically that they did want the time changed back. J. E. Evans, who was chairman of a committee appointed last month to try to prevent the change wa sput in charge of another group of men to obtain several signers for a petition asking the change. The other men were Ed Beach, G. F. Schenck, C. O. Brown and H. H. Overton.

A. C. Shelburne was chairman of the club today and the attendance prize, given by him, was drawn by Dr. G. W. Stone. There was no speaker, but activities of the clubs in this district each on a separate sheet of paper, were distributed around the table and read by members, making a very instructive program. More than 50 were present today. Supt. J. W. Bradner presided at the meetin gtoday in the absence of President A. P. Liebig. No particular matters were brought up, other than the announcement of the Ladies Night, Thursday night next, when G. H. Talbott will be chairman and the Girl and Boy Scouts will be guests of the club.

Mr. Bradner urged the continued support by Middlesboro business men of the football team, predicting a successful season for thi steam. He urged the Kiwanians to encourage the boys that are going out for football, especially the ones not on the first team who go out for practice.

IAT'S GOING ON IN THE WORLD

ele Shoals — Oklahoma — La- Germany.

ontroversy has started between Ford and Secretary of War s which promises to count a lot ities.

d blames Weeks for his failure t Muscle Shoals. Nor that he Ford says. True, he thinks e meant to injure him, but the s he has water power enough. e remarks, it is not to me that s has anything to explain; let explain to the farmers."

That is, Ford declares, the thing for which the Shoals really are valuable is to supply the farmers with cheap fertilizer. And this, he predicts, if "Weeks' friends" get them, is just what they won't use them for. They can afford, he says, to pay all it's worth for the property, in order to let it stay idle, so as to "retain the endless millions they now make through exhorbitant prices of power and fertilizer."

Secretary Weeks' Reply

Weeks thought this statement by Ford worth a visit to President Coolidge right away. Then he issued an answer. "Reckless assertions" on Ford's part was its keynote. His reply, Weeks added, would have been "hotter if I were able to speak as a private citizen."

Graft Charges Made

The Oklahoma Legislature finally met in special session. It was called by Governor Walton to consider anti-Ku Klux laws, but many people thought an attempt to impeach Walton would come first. Instead, a huge graft scandal came to the fore. A debate started in which it was charged official corruption has been rampant ever since the state was admitted. An investigation is to begin at once.

Federation of Labor

The American Federation of Labor in session at Portland, Ore., re-elected Samuel Gompers president, after vigorously repudiating the views of the "red" element which Gompers accused of "boring from within."

In the Ruhr

When Germany surrendered to France in the Ruhr she thought France would be ready to discuss a settlement. However, France says there's nothing to discuss. Just go back to work, she told the Ruhr people.

France seems to have two ideas in mind:

1.—To keep Germany from having a word to say about any sort of a bargain.

2.—Arrange matters as she wants them, avoiding a debate which England might try to break into.

Asks More Power

This leaves Germany in as bad shape as if she hadn't surrendered. The Reichstag has voted a dictator's powers to Chancellor Stresemann in the hope that he may hold the empire together thus. Food riots are rampant throughout Germany.

ALL DAY SINGING AT HARROGATE NEXT SUNDAY

An all day singing will be held at Harrogate, Tenn., Sunday, October 21, under the auspices of the music department of Lincoln Memorial University. The University is a member of the Claiborne county singing convention association, and every choir in the county has been invited to attend the singing Sunday. Several classes have already signified their intention of being present. Neighbors and friends are assisting in spreading a basket dinner on the University campus, for the visiting singers. Professor J. W. Denny, head of the music department, is making the arrangements.

Fields Is Dodging These Issues!

PARI-MUTUEL ISSUE

DAWSON declares that the pari-mutuel question is a moral one to be settled by the voters through the election of a new Legislature, and that if this Legislature passes a bill repealing the pari-mutuel statute, he will sign it.

FIELDS has been silent on this issue since his nomination and will not say whether he would sign or veto such a bill.

STATE HIGHWAY COMMISSION

DAWSON pledges himself to appoint a State Highway Commission of prominent and capable men---and gives their names, equally divided between the two political parties.

FIELDS gives the name of one Democrat and remains silent as to any other appointments.

BOARD OF CHARITIES AND CORRECTION

DAWSON pledges himself to re-appoint the splendid non-partisan Board of Charities and Correction now in office, which enjoys the confidence and approval of leading men and women of both parties and is made up of leaders of the State's business, civic and professional activities.

FIELDS says he does not know these men and women and refuses to pledge himself to re-appoint the present board.

COAL TAX ISSUE

DAWSON commits himself unequivocally to oppose either a sales or tonnage tax upon coal.

FIELDS has been silent on this issue since his nomination.

TEXTBOOK COMMISSION

DAWSON approves the present Textbook Commission endorsed by leading Democratic and Republican newspapers, educators and individuals throughout the State.

FIELDS refuses to say what he will do if he is Governor when the terms of the members of this Commission expire.

FOR many years now, Goodyear Tire prices have been kept consistently lower than the average price level for all commodities, as you see from the above chart. At the same time, Goodyear quality has been consistently bettered. Today, Goodyear Tire prices are lower than in 1914, and Goodyear quality is the highest ever. This is a good time to buy Goodyears.

As Goodyear Service Station Dealers we sell and recommend the new Goodyear Cords with the beveled All-Weather Tread and back them up with standard Goodyear Service

"Makes Mighty Good Soap"

Announcement

F. P. Scales, Incorporated, announce a reorganization embracing the following changes in the personnel of the Company, effective October 15 1923.

Executive Staff

F. P. SCALES, President
CHAS. COCHRAN, Vice-Pres.
P. T. COLGAN. Treas-Gen Mgr

Directors

F. P SCALES, CHAS COCHRAN
P. T. COLGAN, W. L SHELTON

The above re-organization was made necessary by reason of the rapid growth and increase in business of the corporation, which required additional capital and a closer personal touch with the associate dealer handling Dodge Brothers motor cycles in the territory which F. P. Scales, Incorporated represent.

For City Commissioner

JUDGE J. L. MANRING

I am in the commissioner race in earnest. I am not the candidate of any faction, party or administration. If elected I shall take office unpledged to anyone, except the citizens of Middlesboro. I pledge myself to faithfully serve their best interests to the best of my ability.

I favor the building of streets, and every other improvement of our city, consistent with economy, our ability to pay and 100% service for every dollar spent.

I favor the continuance of the present public school system and also a fund for maintaining and repairing the streets which are now built and those that will be built in the future and for purchasing such machinery necessary to keep our streets clean and sanitary.
